2001 will be remembered as a year of great challenge—for our country, for its citizens, and for our economy. CVS Corporation will remember the year no differently.

Businesses of all sizes and across every industry faced intense challenges as we adjusted to the realities of our weakening economy. We are fortunate that our business, for the most part, is recession-resistant since we sell items that people need in their daily lives. Nevertheless, we experienced some specific areas of disappointment in 2001. We have taken action to correct the isolated pockets of problems that were within our control. Those factors not within our control—including the absence of major new drug approvals, the timing of generic introductions, and the weak economy—are likely to rebound over time. We see significant cause for optimism in 2002 and beyond.

We believe the pharmacy industry has the best long-term growth dynamics in all of retail. According to IMS Health, the pharmacy industry is projected to grow at a 12 to 14% annual rate through 2005. By that time, the pharmacy industry is expected to fill one billion more prescriptions than it does today. An aging American population, the introduction of new drugs, a strong generic pipeline, and the prospect of expanding Medicare benefits all contribute to this promising outlook. With more market leadership positions than any competitor—we rank #1 or #2 in 75% of the markets we serve—we are extremely well positioned to seize such growth opportunities.

Our prescription for growth includes a renewed focus on what made us so successful in the past—superior execution at the store level—by assuring our stores meet the “Triple S” of customer service. We want to be sure our customers can find everything they expect in-stock, that they can shop in a neat, well-organized store, and that they experience quick, personal, courteous service.

We are positioning ourselves with cutting-edge technology and innovative marketing programs, designed to improve service to customers and keep them coming back to our stores. Our ExtraCare® Loyalty Card, launched in early 2001, already has more than 25 million cardholders, far surpassing our projections. Our EPIC (Excellence in Pharmacy Innovation and Care) solution is active now in every store, increasing pharmacy productivity and reducing customer wait times. And our Assisted Inventory Management (AIM) system, which will be rolled out in 2002, is expected to improve our in-stock position, thereby enhancing customer service.

Our strong balance sheet is more cause for optimism as we enter 2002. We have the financial strength to support our aggressive growth program in the years to come.

We intend to leverage that strength as we target and enter new markets. We are establishing beachhead positions in some of the fastest-growing drugstore markets in the U.S., including Tampa, Orlando, Ft. Lauderdale, Miami, Chicago, Las Vegas, Dallas, and Houston. Early results are extremely promising. We plan to continue penetrating these and other high-growth markets in 2002 and the foreseeable future.

Finally, I have great confidence in our people, particularly our senior management team, which I believe is the best in the industry. They have played an integral part in our past successes.

We have a strong history of growth at CVS, making swift, steady progress since becoming a public company in 1996. Then, we had annual sales of $5 billion. Today, sales are more than $22 billion. Then, we had 1,400 stores in 14 states and the District of Columbia. Today, we rank #1 in store count with approximately 4,200 stores in 33 states and the District of Columbia.
